The President promised that the United States will play an active role in the area as peacemaker, and he left the area with the message he came with: War is no solution to Middle East

Whether he was buoyed by the acclaim he has received or overwhelmed by the almost intractable difficulties ahead was unknown, but he maintained a note of cautious optimism in his public statements.

The President said at Amman Airport, before boarding his plane, that all the leaders he met "are dedicated to finding a way to peace." He did not say that leaders on both sides presented arguments hinting at no com-

Italy Premier Begins Talks Seeking Accord on Austerity

By Paul Hofmann

ROME, June 18 (NYT).-Premier Mariano Rumor and other top politicians today began a search for an accord on austerity measures that would permit the three-month-old coalition government to survive.

Mr. Rumor started a series of crisis meetings with the leaders of the four parties that have been backing his government.

Participants told newsmen that one of the topics discussed at the meetings was how to reduce purchasing power in the overheated Italian economy by raising $5 or $6 billion in new texes this year. State revenues from all sources amounted to about $30 billion last year.

The crisis meetings are expected to continue tomorrow.

PHNOM PENH, June 18 (NYT). ably stable, functioning govern--With toughness and finesse, the new U.S. ambassador to Cambodia. John Dean, has been charging around the country, reproaching generals, wooing opposition leaders and searching—so far in vain for some insurgents who are willing to negotiate.

The government of Marshal Lon Nol is widely regarded as corrupt, disorganized and ineffectual, and Mr. Dean is a zealous practitioner of pragmatic diplomacy. His aim. according to those who have watched him operate, is to make the government strong enough to withstand further military and economic pressure from the Communist-led insurgents and thereby force them eventually to the bargaining table.

The energy and bluntness with which he has pursued this mission have already made Mr. Dean's name a household word in Phnom Penh-at least in the villas of the generals and ministers.

He has been known to fly to besieged government enclaves, where he prods military com-manders into starting attacks.

He instructs them in the principle of keeping pressure on their enemy on one place to siphon off insurgent troops from another. He pushes them to step up re-

He was reported recently to have persuaded the government to retire 10 generals, arguing that the command structure was top-heavy and too old and lacked the prospect of advancement for young officers.

This may not fit the image of a United States disengaged from Indochina, but then the image does not fit the reality. As Mr. Dean is reportedly fond of point-ing out to Cambodian officials, second million a year in American aid is being provided to this tiny country, and it is his job to make sure it is spent well, not wasted

In that sense, his activities cut across ideological lines. He not only is pushing the military into action but also is apparently making an effort to weed out corruption and eradicate some of the other fils that American liberals have long pointed to as reasons why they think the United States should not be supporting Marshal Lon Nol.

For example, Cambodian officials say it was Mr. Dean who persuaded them to end their censorship of dispetches to the foreign press. And when a recent audit by the embassy showed that some aviation fuel had disappeared from air-force stocks, Mr. Dean is said to have required the Cambodian government to repay the United States for all $310,000

10 Soviet Jews Allowed to Leave For Rabbi School

MOSCOW, June 18 (NYT).--The Soviet government has given approval for 10 young men to take rabbinical training in Hungary at the only functioning Jewish seminary in Eastern Europe, it was reported today.

Rabbi Arthur Schneider, presideut of the Appeal of Conscience Foundation and rabbi of the Park East Synagogue in New York disclosed the decision after meeting this morning with Petr Makart-sev, deputy chairman for the Soviet Council on Religious Affairs. The shortage of rabbis is an.

acute problem for Soviet Jewry. Western specialists have estimated that fewer than six rabbis are now serving the country's two million Jews and that major communities in Kicy, Odessa and Leningrad are without a rabbi. Mr. Schneider had previously negotiated permission for two Soviet Jews to take rabbinical training at the Budapest semi-nary. The cost of the 10 candidates' education will be financed partly by Soviet Jewry and partly by funds from the Appeal of Conscience Foundation.

Introducing the Airbus. Extravagant on comfort. Stingy on fuel.

The Airbus is a remarkable aircraft combining two advantages never before present on short flights: maximum comfort and large capacity.

The Airbus gives you lots of legroom, more than you've ever had on short flights. It has great big doors, spacious entryways, two wide aisles. And because there's twice the cabin baggage space, you can carry aboard larger bags than ever before.

Even a large suitcase of 45 by 37 cm is permitted, and it stores conveniently in an enclosed space over your seat. Throughout the Airbus, seating is arranged so that you're never more than one seat away from an aisle. You can even choose to sit in a no-smoking section if you wish. In fact, every detail down to the lighting and air conditioning has been conceived with your comfort and convenience in mind.

One of the Airbus' greatest advances is its engines. They're the quietest jet engines ever developed. And moreover, they use a lot less fuel than previous jets. With the Airbus' large capacity, there's a tremendous saving on fuel per passenger.

So when you fly the Airbus, go ahead and enjoy its extravagance on comfort. It's justified by its stinginess on fuel.

For the moment at least, no one is predicting a change of government. The military regime, which took power in February 1972, is generally credited with ruling efficiently and being considerably less corrupt than its predecessors.

Meanwhile, oil money pours in, Texaco-Gulf consortium pumps petroleum through a 342-mile pipeline constructed through the Amazonian jungle and over a rocky pass 13,000 feet high in the Andes. Most of the oil is exported to the United States.

Figures provided by Texaco indicate that the government receives 67 percent of the oil money in direct or indirect taxes. It also carefully monitors operation of the wells and pipelines

"You don't move in the oil industry without government control, and that's good," a Texaco representative said. "We're a very good guest in Ecuador.

The action came after Sen. James Abourezk, D-S.D., called for the nomination's rejection as a clear signal to the administration that the Congress is fed up with fuel-pricing policies that fleece the public for the benefit of the major oil companies."

The nomination of Mr. Sawhill, who had been deputy director of the Federal Energy Office before William Sunon moved up to be secretary of the Treasury, had been previously approved by the Senate resterday. But that action was rescinded when Sen. Aboureak advised leaders that he wished to speak against it.

A Merchant Vessel Reaches Cyprus-After 22 Centuries

By Steven V. Roberts

KYRENIA, Cyprus, June 18 (NYT).—About 2200 years ago. tramp merchant ship set off on a journey through the eastern Mediterranean, stopping at such islands as Samos. Kos and Rhodes trading in oil and wine, millstones and almonds.

Less than two miles outside this port on the north coast of Cyprus, the ship sank in 100 feet of water, probably while trying to ride out storm.

A bit off schedule, the old tramp has finally made it to Kyrenia, Unearthed from the sea floor by a team of archaeologists, it is the oldest vessel ever recovered from the sea and the second oldest known to survive from antiquity, according to Michael Katsey, the director of the excavation. The older one is a Nile riverboat found in the Great Pyramid of Cheops. After seven years of work, this "time capsule," as Mr. Katsey calls it, is going on display soon, with air-conditioning to preserve the wood. The setting will be the former barracks room of a Crusaders' castle that has guarded the entrance to this lovely harbor since AD 1200.

Built to Last The simp's skeleton still bears cated craftsman. "He built it to last," said the archaeologist, gazing up at the wide-bottomed hull. curving gracefully toward the barrel-vaulted ceiling of the castle. "He built it with his name on it. He was saying, this is my work and I'm proud of it." The resurrection of this "giant jigtaw puzzle" began in 1965, when a local sponge diver noticed a large cache of amphorae embedded in the bottom. Mr. Katsev, a doctoral candidate at the University of Pennsylvania, and his wife. Susan, a sculptor and draftsman, came to Cyprus in 1967 looking for a promising wreck and were told about the vases. Extensive surveys convinced the Katseys that the find was worth pursuing and they went back to the United States to raise money and recruit a team. The total cost of about $350,000 has been borne mainly by the National Geographic Society, the National Endowment for the Humanities, the Cyprus Mines Corp. and the Cook Foundation

Foreign Fleets Over-Fish New England Waters

By John Kifner

OVER GEORGES BANK North Atlantic, June 18 (NYT).—In 1960 the fertile fishing grounds of these waters, about 70 miles off the North American coast, were worked only by small boats out of New England and Canada.

Now huge trawlers from afarthe Soviet Union, East European countries and, increasingly, Japan -drag their nets here and dump their catches into factory ships for processing and freezing, harvesting so much that they have depleted the fish population and drastically reduced the New England fishing industry.

Three species of fish central to the Yankee trade-haddock, yellow-tailed flounder and herringhave been so depleted that marine recover. And, for the consumer, the micreasing scarcity has driven the price of fresh fish in many cases higher than steak.

All along the New England coastline, fishing is a dying business, and the salty fishermen and fresh scalood, as symbolic of the region as autumn leaves and church steeples, are getting scarcer each year.

In Eastport, Maine, on the northern border, once "the sardine capital of the world," there is no more fleet, and the remaining canneries pack Canadian-caught fish. In Portsmouth, N.H., lobstermen like Geno Marconi and his son curse the foreign ships that run over their pols, nort, has largely become a process ing center for imported frozen fish, At the Boston fish pier one Friday, where once hundreds of men wielded filet knives on the daily catch, only six boats were listed on the blackboard for the morning section. Off the Wantucket shoels last summer, a swordfish captain wrote in his log of a horizon covered with Russian tions are fishing on the Georges Bank, and in southern New England waters. The New England fishing industry is pressing for a bill pending in Congress that would extend the present 12-mile American fishing waters to a 200-mile limit. The bill is co-sponsored by Rep. Gerry Studds, D-Mass., whose district covers the Massachusetis enastline below Boston, and Sen. Warren Magnuson, D-Wash, Fishermen in the northern Pacific, particularly off the coast of Alaska, are facing similar prob-

Control of offshore waters and fishing rights will be one of the major topics at the UN sponsored Law of the Sea Conference, which will open in Caracas. Venezuela, Thursday.

The fishermen's plight is anaiogous to that of the one-muie family farm trying to compete with the modern corporate agricallure business.

The government-subsidized for eign fleets that began to appear here in the early 1960s consist of modern stern trawlers that bring their catch back to mother slups and factory vessels that freeze filets into blocks and convert virtually every part of the fish into such products as fish meal and fertilizer. One of the Russian base ships, for example, is 532 feet long and carries 2 crew of 640. Some such ships stay at sea a year, with crews occasionally being rotated by nelicopter.

By contrast, most of the Amer ican boats are tiny and outmoded side trawlers, some dating back more than 40 years. The fishermen concede, too, that American crews do not like to go out for more than a week Washington subsidized OT 80. half the $10-million cost of two modern long-range trawlers several years ago, but crews could not be found to man them.

U.S. Imports

The result is that two-thirds of the fish eaten in the United States-much of it in such processed forms as fish sticks-is imported. Even much of the fresh fish in New England is trucked in iced from Canadian

The foreign fleets, American fishermen complain, have torn up the marine habitat by bottom reproduce.

Particularly harmful has been pulse fishing, the practice of a fleet closing in on a large school of fish and taking everything. On an attempt to halt the depletion, the 17-nation International Commission for Northwest Atlantic Fisherjes has placed some ground off-limits and for the first time, this year has introduced an overall weight quota of 924,000 metric tons 1.200.000 metric tons were harrested in 1972), which is to be further reduced next year.

A Week's Catch But any effect of the new regulations is a decade away for boats like the Agatha, one of half a dozen left in the once proud Boston fleet, whose crew of seven tied up by the dilapidated old Fish Exchange one recent Friday morning in plenty of time for the 7:15 auction buzzer. After a week on the Georges Bank, there were 36,000 pounds of mixed pollack, haddock, con. catfish, redfish, hake and a flat-

U.S. Sees Tough Bargaining on Law of Sea

By Leslie H. Gelb

WASHINGTON. June 18 CNYT: The chief U.S. negotistor on the law of the seas said vesterday that nations seeking to work out a treaty governthe oceans face tough political choices, but he expressed a belief that they will make those choices to "avoid escalating conflict."

The negotiator, John Stevenson, made the statement in discussing the third UN Law of the Seas Conference. Its working sessions are scheduled to be-Caracas. Venezuela, on Thursday, A two-week opening session was held at the UN last December.

The UN has invited 150 countries to the conference, and about 140 are expected to attend. The conference is scheduled to end Aug. 29. The hope is that a treaty can be drafted establishing territorial limits, and zones of control of resources on the continental shelf beyond those limits. and providing an international suthority to deal with control of

Rules Break Down

Mr. Stevenson noted that there has been a breakdown in the old, informal rules governing the oceans, and that a new ecremble is on for sea resources. "We are preparing a constitution for the oceans, which constitute 70 percent of the world," he said.

Mr. Stevenson, who is a special representative of President Nixon as well as chairman of the American negotiating team on these matters, briefed reporters at the State Department on the American negotiating position.

He stressed that there were conditions to each American proposal. As described by Mr. Stevenson the U.S. proposals call for the following:

• Extension of territorial sovereignty from the present three miles to 12, provided there are "international guarantees for unimpeded transit through and over territorial straits."

'Full Utilization'

• Establishment of a "broad area of coastal resource control" beyond territorial limits on condition that the control of resources not be equated with the extension of sovereignty, and on acceptance of the principle of full utilization." By this principle, a coastal nation would have to be able to exploit the resources in its "economic zone" fully, or other states could encroach upon

 Establishment of an international authority to deal with seabeds beyond continental shelves, but "basically as a licensing organization" on a "first-come. first-served basis." This body could also provide for revenue sharing and technical aid to developing nations.

The negotiator noted that the Caracas conference would pit developed nations against developmg countries, landlocked countries against coastal ones and of internationalism against national and domestic political concerns.

Conflicting Interests

He said that before the United States could sign any treaty. conflicting interests within this country would have to be reconciled. The conflicts, he said, were among the military, commercial shipping concerns, petroleum and other mining groups, fishery limit, and some, like Ecuador lobbies and environmental-protection organizations.

Negotiations on territorial limits and resource-control areas are at Caracas, Mr. Stevenson said complicated by the fact that this would be a "shallow victory." implying that Washington would ent Some countries declare a three-mile limit, others a 12-mile

N.Y. Explorers' Club Thinks Discovery Is Still Possible

By Robert A. Jones

NEW YORK, June 18.-In the days when there were still blank spaces on maps of the wor! a, members would sit around the main lounge of the Explorers' Club, munching on antelope canapes and receiving reports from the latest expeditions to Bongak or Smedjebacken.

The club was founded in 1904. It inherited the mantle of discovery from the Royal Geographic Society and the Royal Academy of London after those clubs had spent half a century, helping to open Africa to the white man and the British Empire. Within a few years, the New York group had gained an international standing, becoming one of the very few private clubs to which the great and famous of geographic discovery came to mingle and occasionally backer with their pecrs.

Shrinking Blanks But even at the beginning of the 20th century, the world's blank spaces had grown small, with first-rank geographic challenges left only at the two polar regions and perhaps, in parts of South America.

Now in its 70th year, the club suffered a kind of official humilintion recently when the City of New York revoked its tax-exempt status, contending that the institution's scientific pursuits no longer merited such standing.

"Some people are surprised we still exist." member Russell Gurness said. "They always ask if there's really any place left to

For Mr. Gurnee, who recently traveled the length of a Puerto Rican river that went underground nine times, and for the 1,800 other members of Line club, there are indeed places left to explore, although they concede that the best sites are probably gone forever.

As one reward for getting there first, Dr. Cochran and his com-panions will have the honor of naming the peaks they scale. The team is leaning toward Eskuno "It's good politics these days," he said.

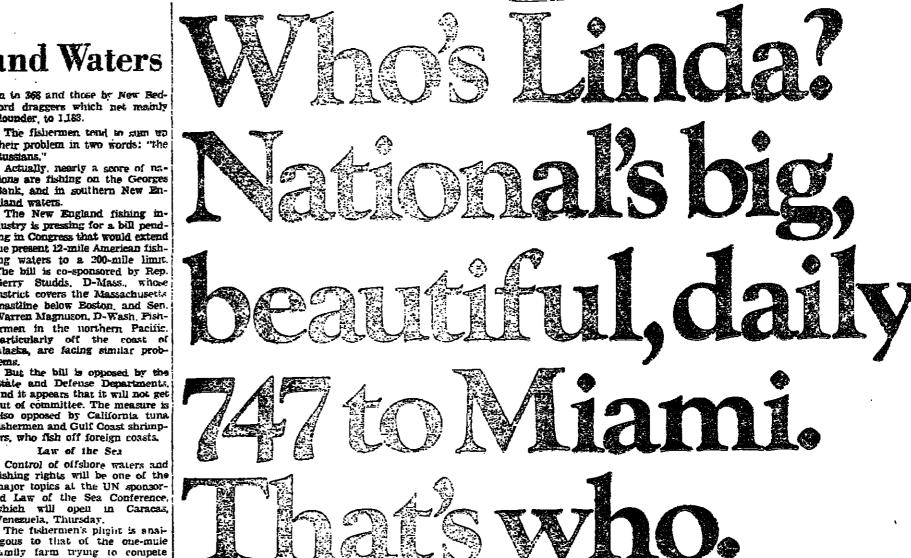

For most expeditions, the lare is no longer virgin territory, however. In most cases, the exploration-motivated expedition has been replaced by what Mr. von Hoffman calls the "ologies' -anthropology, geology, ornithology and so on.

winding up his whirlwind quest for what he had earlier described in Jerusalem as "the possible dream" of peace in the Middle East.

There are grounds for Mr. Nizon's cautious optimism in the cordial reception the American President has received in such disparate and long-contentions capitals as Cairo and Jerusalem, Damascus and Amman. The considence that Arab leaders have placed in the peace efforts of Mr. Nixon and his Secretary of State, Henry Kissinger, is an encouraging token of their readiness at last to move toward a compromise settlement of their long-standing quarrel with Israel. Although Secretary Kissinger tried, in his press bilefing Monday, to shunt this thorny issue into a vague future, the problem of a distinct role for the Palestinlans cannot be sidestepped much longer without endangering the impressive progress that has been made so far in Cairo, Jiddah and Damascus.

Collective Crisis...

These are days in which seemingly melodramatic forebodings for the world assume the harsh reality of official statistics, of sober projections by reasonable and softspoken professionals not given to excesses of doomsaying. Thus, a task force of economists from North America, Western Europe and Japan have concluded that in the coming months of summer, "the lives and fortunes of large numbers of human beings hang upon the outcome of decisions taken by a small handful of national leaders."

Their reference, in the first report from the privately organized Trilateral Commisgion, is to an international economic "explosion" triggered by: a fourfold increase in oil prices; higher costs and shortages of food and fertilizer, and acute inflation and danger of recession in the industrialized world-all coinciding now at a moment when national leadership of the non-Communist world is in a state of visible disarray.

Drawing on the estimates of the World Bank and other global financial institutions, these experts propose urgent cooperative efforts between the industrial world and the oil-producing countries to provide a minimum of $8 billion in concessional aid for some 30 countries poor in resources but with otherwise face economic disaster—not within prices. the decade, but within the next two years.

These countries are confronted with import bills of $5 billion in excess of their previous projections because of higher costs of oil food and fertilizer. Just this excess ts double the total amount of development assistance they now receive from all the industrial nations. With each passing month, this problem will only grow more scute, as the oil bills come in and the balances of payments of many rich and poor countries alike grow more loosided.

Two of the Trilateral Commission's specific recommendations deserve special consideration. First is for the immediate opening of high-level negotiations between the biiproducing countries and the governments of Europe, North America and Japan as a group to devise the wars in which the concessional aid can be divided.

The commission experts suggest an equal division-$1.5 billion from each groupthrough various financial means and postponement of debt repayments.

More tentatively, but with far more profound implications, the trilateral task force suggests that the Soviet Union be encouraged to participate in this emergency aid program. International financial planners have grown accustomed to leaving the Soviet Union out of their calculations and programs, on the basis of clear historical and ideological experience. But the Russians have become increasingly integrated in fact, if not institutionally, in the world trading economy, and have actually received considerable financial populations totaling nearly one billion, which . benefit from the increase in raw material

President Nixon's meeting with the Sovies leaders late this month would be an ideal occasion to press for agreements by which Moscow would participate with the other industrial capitals in ad hoc arrangements to ease the immediate bucdens of the developing nations.

Portugal and Africa

The coalition of widely ranging political interests in the [Lisbon] administration will only hang together if a momentum is maintained in Portugal's disengagement from couthern Africa. It was on the basis of swift decolonization that the majority of the ministers joined the government. Dr. Soares has already committed himself to resign if negotiations to this end fail. A Many-Splattered Dream

By C. L. Sulzberger

NEW YORK.—President Nix-on's Middle Esstern tour, which has already underscored dramatic shifts in U.S. policy, brings America for the first time to actual realization that the flickering idea of Arab unity is of inescapable importance to the United States.

What will now have to be demonstrated is whether the friendship sealed by the presidential journey can truly be achieved without sacrificing traditional U.S. links to Israel; also whether, as a result of the new diplomatic balance, real peace can be achieved in the bloodsoaked Palestine region.

The dream of unity is an imhas long been marred by quarrels and bickering. Its vision, never-theless, was well-stated by Michel Adlag of the Syrian Baath party as "a tendency toward universalism. People of the same race, the same language, the same religion. the same culture, the same history, the same past and the same problems want to unite and strike toward a better future."

But inherent paradones lie like reefs beneath the surface of these vords. Indeed, Lebanon, tiny de-scendant of arcient Phoenicia, displays in microcosm almost every Arab unity problem. Its population contains many religious including Marchite and Greek Orthodox Christians, Sunnt and Shia Mosiems and the heretical Druse. Its race and past are unique. g ISBON-While planning the coup that overthrew Portugal's 48-year-old dictatorship on April 25. the young army officers primarily responsible had no in-tention of letting the United States have the faintest inkling of what was afoot. They were convinced that if the Central Intelligence Agency knew a coup was even being talked of, the agency would promptly inform the DGS, Portugal's secret police, with which the CIA had close and cordial ties.

Yet, in Spain, which now eyes free Portugal both uneasily and hopefully—according to one's po-litical outlook—a long-experienced former diplomat recently delivered himself of the opinion that the United States must have given its approval in advance for the Portuguese coup. Otherwise, he said confidently, the United States never would have permitted the dictatorial Caetano regime to be overthrown.

A younger Spaniard, deeply involved in clandestine activities for a more democratic regime, took a darker view. Citing what "everybody knows," that the CIA had overthrown the Allende government in Chile, he remarked gloomily that the United States probably would never allow Spain to have democracy.

This kind of thing is deeply disturbing, even shocking, to an American who would like to think of his country as the champion of democracy and freedom every-

CIA really did overthrow Allende, or whether the agency would in fact have betrayed the Portuguese coup to the DGS; and explanations that the United States ought logically to welcome more mocratic regimes in both Spain and Portugal, since that would ease the domestic political burden of alliances with these countries, do not alter the case. The fact is that many people abroad believe the United States is the enemy of freedom, and that it uses the CIA relemilessly and etficiently to oppose democratic

Essential Question

The essential question is what standard of conduct-and honesty-the citizens of a democratic society can expect from officials exercizing great responsibility in an era of extraordinary domestic and international pressures.

To capture the context of that essential question, it is necessary to recall what caused the great concern about "leaks" which led to the acknowledged wiretapping of 17 government officials and journalists.

The story that has been pin-pointed as triggering Mr. Klasin-ger's anger was a May 9, 1969, article in The New York Times by William Beecher, reporting that American B-52 bombers had begun raiding Viet Cong and North Vietnamese camps and supply dumps inside Cambodia without protest from the Care-

It was on the day that article appeared that the late FBI director J. Edgar Hoover wrote that Mr. Rissinger had complained of "an extraordinarily damaging" news leak and urged him to use "whatever resources I need to find out who did this."

Not Disputed

Neither then nor later did the administration dispute the accuracy of the article. And Beecher himself is now serving President Nixon as deputy assistant secretary of defense for public affairs, which is not a job usually given to an "irresponsible" journalist.

What made Beecher's article "extraordinarily damaging" was that it revealed that American military operations were being conducted in a supposedly neutral country, with the acquiescence of its supposedly neutral government, but without the knowledge or sanction of the American people or Congress. Not until four years later, in July of 1973, did the Nixon adtion, Gen. Wheeler said Mr. Kisright because Kissinger had told the truth to six pro-administration members of Congress and then pledged them to secrecy, Even now, Mr. Kissinger is blind to the conflict between this behavior and democracy. "I recognize that national security has been abused in recent years," he said in his Salzburg news conference, "but because there have been abuses does not mean that there was not justified concern by honorable people. It did not occur to me in expressing my concern that this might lead to the burglary of a doctor's office." It is hard to know what to make of such a haive remark from such a sophisticated person. But it is obvious that a government that is so convinced of the superiority of its own wisdom, and so distrustful of its own people that it will not make its policy public, will always find ways to rationalize the most ex- & D treme measures to protect what it regards as "secrets." In the coming era of energy and commodity shortages, of monetary and fiscal crises, of live diplomatic and military turmon.

there will always be an ercuse for officials of a democracy to invoke the magic claim of "nstional security."

Or See Parity Changes, German Bank Warns

FRANKFURT, June 18 (Renters).—West Germany's central bank today urged countries running large balance-of-payments deficits to come to grips with inflation or face unavoidable changes in currency parities.

A bank report said annual price rises in many of Germany's major trading partners are at least double the rate in the federal republic, now around 7 per-cent, but these countries are starting to realize this is a major problem which can be solved only by tougher policies.

Financial aid by strong economies would only delay a solu-tion to the problem, the report

Surplus Rises

The bank said Germany's current surplus with the other countries in the European joint currency float—the Benefux countries and Scandinavia—rose to 2.8 pillion deutsche marks in the first four months of this year, compared with 500 million DM in the same period of 1973.

Its surplus with Italy rose tenfold to 2 billion DM in the first four months of this year. With France, it tripled to 2.7 billion DM.

> Its deficit against states belonging to the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries
> (OPEC) rose to 4.8 billion DM
> in the first four months of this year from 1.1 billion DM in the same period of 1973.

The Bundesbank also reported that Germany's real gross national product was 1.5 percent higher in the first 1974 quarter than a year before, although this increase was due solely to ex-

Real domestic sales by volume were slightly lower than in the same 1973 period, and while this shows the relatively short time it has taken Germany to meet increased imported raw materials costs by exports, the consequences for individual firms or industry sectors which cannot switch to export sales are considerable, the bank said.

Wages have risen much faster than productivity, contributing to a considerable rise in costs. Preliminary figures show slightly more than half of the 9 percent annual rise in prices for the first quarter was due to domestic cost increases, with the remainder due dearer imported goods, the

Ford Stops Work At Three Plants

DEARBORN, Mich., June 18 (AP-DJ) - Ford Motor Co. announced that it will suspend production at three more of its North American assembly plants tomorrow, because of a shortage of parts supplies resulting from a strike at the company's Chicago stamping plant, Ford has already suspended production at six other assembly plants because of the week-long strike at the Chicago facility.

Ford said the new temporary closings will occur at the Atlanta, Georgia and Lorain, Ohio, assembly plants and the Michigan truck plant at Wayne, Michigan, and will affect 8,800 workers.

Prices Plunge On London's Stock Market

LONDON, June 18 (AF-DJ) -Prices plunged on the London Stock Exchange today, with many shares falling to record lows and the Financial Times industrial index dropping to its lowest level in 12

The index fell 7.8 points to 260.2, its lowest level since June 25, 1962.

Brokers attributed the decline to worries about labor unrest. About 20.000 workers are on strike in Britain at present and another 100,000 might strike later this week unless they obtain cost-of-living pay increases.

Firms to Fight Jamaican Action On Aluminum

By Gene Smith

NEW YORK, June 18 (NYT). -The major U.S. aluminum companies said yesterday that they plan to fight bauxite taxes proposed by the Jamaican govern-

Kaiser Aluminum & Chemical. Aluminum Co. of America and Reynolds Metals, each of which operates in Jamaica, indicated separately that their existing contracts "prohibit an increase in taxes and levies applied to the mining, processing or export of bauxite unless such tax or levy is agreed to by both the govern-ment and the company involved."

The three said that the Jamaican government of Prime Minister Michael Hanley had broken existing contracts by signing into law a new production levy act that calls for an initial 7.5 percent tax, retroactive to Jan. 1, on bauxite mined on the island.

The companies insisted that their contracts provide for arbitration of contract disputes before the International Center for Settlement of Investment Disputes, an adjunct of the World

A spokesman for Reynolds said it subscribed to the joint statement of the other producers.

Another major aluminum company, Alcan Aluminum, said that its main agreements were made in Jamaica in 1957, long before the arbitration provisions were agreed upon, but it is now considering what legal redress it might yet have.

U.S. Suggests Conditions on Oil Pooling

Supplies Wouldn't Go To Profligate Nations

BRUSSELS. June 18 (NYT).-The United States has proposed that plans to pool emergency oil supplies among the 12 nations of the Washington energy coordina-tion group should be linked to efforts by the countries to conserve energy and maintain large off stocks against crises.

The idea was presented during a two-day meeting of the energy group which ended here today. The United States, whose vast domestic oil reserves would be committed to such an oil-shiring system, believes that nations which do not make a serious effort to avoid shortages should have less right to pooled supplies in a crisis than those that do take precautions.

Participants in the energy group, which was set up during the February Washington oil conference, are the United States, Japan, Canada, Norway, Britain, Ireland. Denmark, Belgium. Holland, Luxembourg. Italy and West Germany.

France did not join the group when it was formed since it feared such coordination might be considered a common consumers' front by the oil producers.

Reviews Boycott

But informed sources at the conference said bilateral contacts between certain members and France showed that the French might be reconsidering their boycott of the group. The American note on oil sharing, which was presented this week, did not set concrete objectives for energy-saving efforts or the desirable level of stock-U.S. officials said their main objective now is to have the principle of linkage between oilsharing and crisis-preventing measures accepted by the group. After that, decisions on objectives could be made. The group today created a special working party which will examine the U.S. proposal and also a report on the same subject worked out in the Paris-based Organization for Economic Cooperation and Development It will make concrete proposals based on the reports at the next group meeting, July 8 and 9 in

Technical Details A European source said the OECD report dealt with technical details and did not contain the linkage ides which the United evidence of a slight decline in States is seeking The source said that the Europeans were a bit surprised by the strong political engagement which the United States was demanding on the matter, but he predicted that the group would find a solution along the U.S. lines. The group also received a report from a working party on multinational oil companies which suggests that the 12 nations make an agreement under which the oil companies would have to furnish more information to the national governments about their operalighed last Friday. But this was only on the basis of analyzing Textron Deal Is Detailed adverse levels of preceding to see a timetable put on gold ownership on the Congress. Mr. Simon pointed out that if the conditions are not met. I would not be able to recommend" gold ownership. Speaking in an interview, Mr. Simon said that in a period of high inflation rates worldwide it vould be desirable not to do anything which would prompt a flight from currencies into commodities. "It would be most desirable not to lift the can at the psychologically wrong moment." he said, However, he sees encouraging signs in the global battle against measure, proposed in Italy States held confidential discussions. West Germany and Ja-sions on the issue with finance

Mr. Simon said that once the gold ban was lifted the United States would sell some of its official gold stocks to meet all or part of the resultant domestic demand for the metal "because there are obvious balance of payments consequences."

He acknowledged that lifting the ban at the right time would provide an anti-inflationary bias "in that the measure would provide a form of forced saving which tends to reduce demand." Turning to the question of phasing gold out of the monetary system, Mr. Simon said the United Concerning inflation, Mr. Simon forecast that inflation in the United States—now running at an annual rate of 12 percent—would slow to about 7.5 percent by the end of the year and continue

But he expressed concern over wage increases and stressed the need for reasonable settlements as part of the effort to curb inflation,

FINANCIAL NEWS AND NOTES

Japan, U.S., Italy to Develop Jetliner

Japan plans to develop a medium-to-shortrange jetliner jointly with the United States and Italy, a major change from an earlier U.S.-Japan plan. The original plan to develop a short-haul jetliner jointly with Boeing had to be modified after Boeing asked for a change because of changing demands on commercial aircraft since the oil crists," a Japanese government spokesman said. The proposed aircraft would have a range of 2,800 to 3,700 kilometers (1,000 to 2,400 miles) and a capacity of 200 to 240 passengers. The original plan called for a 150 to 200-seat aircraft with a range of 2,200 kilometers (1,400 miles). Japan is to pay 30 percent of the development costs. Boeing 50 percent and Italy 20 percent. Delivery of production models of the new tri-nation jetliner is hoped to start in 1979.

Japanese Raise Steel Prices

The Japanese government has given the coshead to six steel makers to raise steel product prices by an average of 17 percent, or 7,900 year (S28) a ton to offset increases in coking coal, fron ore and oil products. The six Japanese steel mills originally asked for an increase of 10,100 yen a ton. Government officials estimate that the 17 percent price hike would raise the wholesale price index about 0.5 percent. The most seriously affected by the higher steel prices are shipbuilders whose costs might be up about 2 percent—followed by car makers, industrial machinery makers and electric appliance manufacturers, they said.

IBM Orders, Shipments Up

New orders for computers, as well as shipments of them, continue to run substantially above year-ago levels, reports Frank Cary, chairman of International Business Machines. These factors and others, including the continuing high rate of outright purchase of large computers by anstomers, are combining to produce "a very good" second quarter for IBM, he says. IBM executives customeraly are reticent about growth rates and reluctant to appraise the future. Thus,

Mr. Cary says he is "cautiously ontimistic" about the second half, noting that because of a strong second half in 1973 it will be difficult to maintain the revenue and profit increases of this year's first half. "You won't be able to take first-half growth rates and extrapolate the full year," he warns. He also cautions against using any single indicator in attempting to forecast IBM's future. However, he describes the indicators of IBM's current business in highly favorable terms.

Ciba-Geigy Gets Control of Airwick

More than 3.18 million shares, or more than 91 percent of the outstanding stock of Airwick Industries Inc., a U.S. maker of specialized chemical products, have been tendered to Ciba-Geigy, the Swiss pharmaceutical firm. The tender offer for all 3.477 million outstanding Airwick shares, at $12.50 a share, was originally due to expire Monday, but has been extended to Friday. If all shares are tendered, the total potential cost of the transaction would be more than $43 million.

Hitachi Expects Higher Profit

Hitachi expects a 32 percent gain in consolidated net income for the year ended Merch 31 to just over 70 billion yen (about $247 million). Sales are expected to exceed 1.6 billion yena rise of more than 25 percent. Subsidiaries engaged in production of materials, such as Hitachi Metals and Hitachi Cable, have earned large profits, a spokesman notes. The electrical equipment and appliance sectors also reported fairly good business.

Paribas Eyes Stein & Roubaix Merger

France's Cie. Pinancière de Paris et des Pars-Bas (Paribas) and Stein et Roubaix are studying the possible gradual merging of Paribas's property activities with Stein et Roubaix. Paribas currently owns some 5.17 percent in Stein et Roubaix, a holding company. The size of the proposed new grouping would allow it to issue long and medium-term loans on the French and international markets, company of-

New York leads every other state in international trade. Were the bank that knows New York State.

Nearly one-third of the United States' foreign trade moves through New York State's more than 300 offices. More three customs districts; the Port of New York, and Buffalo and Ogdensburg on the St. Lawrence Seaway.

Marine Midland Bank, the bank that knows New York, has been a part of New York's importance as an international marketplace since 1839. Today, we can help you become part of it. Because today, we reach more than 200 cities and towns with banking locations than any other bank in the state. In fact, with resources exceeding $13 billion, Marine Midland is the twelfth largest banking system in the nation.

So, we can put you in touch with suppliers, manufacturers, distributors, retailers. Because we know them. And our knowledge can

That invaluable knowledge, plus our years of experience and our senior officers' desire to get involved, is fully expressed in our international banking capabilities.

Marine Midland Bank, Big bank resources. Personal service. All over New York State.

Knowing New York State makes all the difference in the world.

Comment.

James Reston, C.L. Sulzberger, Joseph Kruit, Russell Baker, Art Buchwald read them in the Tribune.

In Portugal we are your gate to golden business.

Bache Research—one of the biggest and best departments in the industry—has just published a Midyear Forecast. It's most encouraging.

Our analysts feel the market is bottoming out. They foresee real possibilities for a sustained bull market ahead. And they believe this is the time you should consider accumulating quality stocks.

We urge you to read the report as soon as possible. It gives you our analysis of the current market. The economy. And the probable future impact of the three "Is": Inflation, Interest Rates and Impeachment.

It also gives you our current recommendations: eight stocks that we feel are underpriced and have excellent potential for intermediate or long term growth.

Institutional inquiries invited.

EINSTEIN AND THE GENERATIONS OF SCIENCE

By Lewis Feuer, Illustrated. Basic Books. 374 pp. $12.95.

Reviewed by Christopher Lehmann-Haupt

A LBERT EINSTEIN developed his theory of relativity because he was a lonely, late-developing academic outcast with only a few peers on whom he could try out his ideas. Ernst Mach denied the existence of atoms because he wished unconsciously to overthrow the male principle for the female. Ludwig Boltzman committed suicide be-cause he couldn't bear to be iso-lated from the generation that rebelled against the groundwork of his second law of thermodynamics. And Niels Bohr arrived at his theory of complementarity because he was secure in the Kierkegaardian tradition that had begun with a rebellion against determinism. Here, in slightly over-simplified form, are a few of the provocative insights yielded by Lewis Feuer's sociological study, Einstein and the Generations of Science"-whose thesis holds that "the greatest scientists in our century have had the character of generational revolutionaries; their bursts of scientific creative energies were symbiotic with generational movements in their contemporaneous social and political worlds."

And if Prof. Feuer makes it hard for us to resist the truth of these insights and the cogency of the thesis from which he derives them, he makes it even harder for us not to marvel at the intel-lectual history he has written. From his subtle but lucid explication of this century's generational dynamics there emerges a portrait of recent developments in theoretical physics as vivid and schematic as a periodic table. From his sketches of the individual physicists radiates drama as scintillating as a superior novel of ideas.

And as I read Prof. Feuer's study there occurred to me a thought that has struck me with increasing frequency in recent years. This is that ideas, historical events and personalities are best not described by themselves in a vacuum; the most interesting treatments of each subject seem to occur in narratives that relate them to one another. (See Allan Janik's and Stephen Toulmin's "Wittgenstein's Vienna" for an-other good illustration of this.) Or perhaps all I'm saying is that Prof. Feuer's generational theory makes for a strong principle of organization-one of several possible perspectives from which one. can usefully view the century's greatest scientific developments.

But, unfortunately, Prof. Feuer has also tried to write much more than an interdisciplinary intellectual history, and to put his generational theory to other work. And in the third of his book that is not devoted to case studies, something goes dreadfully wrong. Too often here the author repeats himself and seems to be tortuously laboring what should be selfevident, even to someone who hasn't read his illustrations of the point ("We may affirm the following generalization in the sociology of the scientific community: Resistances to a novel theory which are founded on generational or cultural aesthetic me tives will persist and prevent is common acceptance until sor novel prediction derived from th proposed theory is confirmed." B which he simply means that goo new scientific ideas aren't gen erally accepted until they'r proved good for something new.

Too often he seems to be grop ing for pretentious, pseudoscientif ic complexities ("Within the life time of a single generation seems to be a general law tha what was perceived in one's your as an empirical experimental dis covery tends in one's later year to be seen as having been the ra tionalistic intuition of a logicali necessary truth. We might ta evolution from the empiricall contingent to the rationally nec essary." By which I'm not sur what he means. Too often h simply repeats himself. And to often he hammers at his thesis t the point where he appears to b answering a question that a never occurred to us to ask.

What's going on? And wherdoes it go wrong? A number o possibilities occurred to me as read along. Prof. Feuer labors th obvious and repeats himself be canse his material is disorganized and it's disorganized because a least two of the book's four sec tions were originally written a independent papers. He gropes to pretentious complexities because he wishes to dress up sociology as a science as precise and lawful a the theoretical physics he is examining. He pushes his thesi beyond the point where the reader cares about it because (1) he i trying to prove to a readership of Marxist sociologists he alone has in mind that there is at least oneform of generational revolution. that isn't political in its desired ends, or (2) he is trying to persunde the student radicals he crossed swords with at Berkeley in the 1960s that there is at leas: one form of generational revolution that resolves itself non-violently, or (3) both

I am only guessing; I don't know. Prof. Fener offers no. framework for his detour from intellectual history to his attempts to apotheosize his thesis. I car only say I am sorry he chose to detour; for as intellectual history "Rinstein and the Generations o... Science" is exciting and useful while as theory it is tedious and confusing.

vulnerable to the high center, and though they now and then brought off a promising counterattack, particularly when they hit the post in the 83d minute, they could seldom get enough men to the scene of action in time. And that is the secret of modern football. Their most spectacular weapon was the long throw-in of Raymond Richards, while goalie Jack Reilly, Peter Wilson, Manfred Schaefer and the adventurous Colin Curran distinguished

All in all, however, the greenshirted West Germans were able to frolic in the sunshine. Beckenbauer, Paul Breitner, Uli Hoeness, often on the right, and Wolfgang Overath doing much as they pleased. The experience may have eased the pain after the Germans' feeble winning display against Chile, but they scarcely looked like World Cup winners. Though they brought on two substitutes, Bernard Holzenbein and Herbet Wimmer, the Germans again left Gunter Netzer on the sidelines. There was still no attacking bursts from Beckenbauer.

Heynckes and Gerd Mueller, the ball ran loose to the unmarked Overath on the edge of the penalty box. It was a costly indulgence by the Australians, for Overath had time to control the ball, and send his left-footed shot thundering past Reilly, into the top right-hand corner of the goal. The limitations of Australia's brave defense were shown again when Berti Vogts crossed from the right. The blond and stocky Manfred Schaefer could not jump high enough and the ball cleared him for Gerd Mueller to head it firmly against the cross bar. Another long center from the right, this time Juergen Gra-boswski's was headed strongly by Heynckes but Reilly this time made a resourceful save. He was fortunate not to be beaten on a couple of occasions by the careless Hoeness. But Hoeness atoned for this 11 minutes from half time by going out to that exposed right wing egain, leaving his guardlan James Mackay standing with a clever feint, and crossing for Cullmann to head past Reilly. It was clearly high time Mueller acored his first World Cup goal and he scored it very characteristically after 53 minutes. Helzenbein took a corner from the net. WASHINGTON—This is a telephone. It is not making a sound. See how quiet the telephone is. See how happy it so happy? It looks happy because it is making money without doing any work. It is congratulating itself upon such being clever machine. thinking that this man in whose house it is living will soon be giving it even more money to let it take up room in his house.

Look at the man. Can you see the strange hand removing money from his pocket? It is very hard to see. You must look very close-ly. The hand does not belong to the man. It belongs to the telephone. The hand is collecting the money the telephone charges the man for living in his house.

Every year the telephone charges the man $90 for just sitting there doing nothing. Is this man not dumber than any you have ever seen? He has shelves of books which also sit in his house doing nothing, but he would be very angry if one of the books put its hand in his pocket and removed $90 for the privilege of taking up house space.

He would choke the book and call it a scoundrel and throw it out of the house, would he not? Indeed he would. Why does he not choke the telephone and throw it out of the house?

If he did that, you see, he would be cut off from the world. He could no longer hear bad news as soon as it happened. He could no longer be communicated with by people with nothing to communicate.

If he became ill he could not call a doctor who does not make house calls. The man believes it is worth

590 a year to enjoy these blessings. The man is also happy because the telephone cares for so many widows and orphans. He has read

Look at the telephone glow with excitement. Do you know why the telephone is excited? The telephone is hoping the man will call somebody across the city line so it can charge him more

It is hoping he will call somebody who lives in another city so it can charge him lots more money.

See how dreamy the telephone kooks as the man approaches it. It is dreaming of the day when it can charge him tons and tons of more money for talking more than two minutes. It is dreaming of the day when it can charge him truckloads of more money calling someone who lives outside his block.

Oh, see how cross the telephone is. The man is dialing his own long-distance call. The telephone is cross because it will get less more money this way. It wants the man to place the call with the operator so it can get lots more money.

The telephone is so cross that it will not complete the call. It buzzes angrily at the man. See him dial again and again. It is no use. He has made the telcphone too angry. The telephone embarrassed about living in the same house with a miser.

Ah, the man has given up. He is turning on his television set. He is watching a splendid com-mercial. It is telling him about the wonderful service his telephone provides. See the man crying. Do you know why he is crying? Do you think it is because he is reminded of all the widows and orphans his telephone is supporting? Do not be foolish, dear children. He is crying because the telephone hand in his pocket is becoming bigger and bigger and he is thinking that his telephone is conspiring to turn his wife and children into widows and orphans before their time.

Will the telephone then take the poor dears under its generous care? Surely it will. will, why is the tele-

Waterloo battle scene which is at the Panorama Museum.

Belgium, Britain, the 2d Battle of Waterloo

By Jan Sjöby

WATERLOO, Belgium, June 18 (IHT).—Belgo-British units. commanded jointly by the 8th Duke of Wellington and Belgian Baron Snoy et d'Oppuers, are in action in Waterloo village -159 years after the battle. They intend to advance south to the Ohain road and beyond, but they are not going to fight the

"We are here to join them, actually," said Col. Jean Bloch chief of staff of the Belgian divisions of the recently consti-tuted bi-national Waterloo Committee. "We, from north of the old Ohain road front line, are just as anxious as they are to find out eractly what happened around here on that remarkable

The Waterloo Committee-known in somewhat more wordy French as the Comité pour les Etudes Historiques de la Bataille de Waterloo-was constituted here this spring with 18 charter members, British and Belgian, all distinguished scholars, Paragraph 2 in the Act of Constitution places the head office in the neadquarters of the 1st Duke of Wellington, across from the royal chapel and village church on the Chaussée de Bruxelles.

"Our primary aim," said Col. Bloch, "is to restore to the historic site the dignity it deserves. After all, 140,000 men took to the field on that day and some 50,000 stayed for good. It was, we believe, the biggest and bloodiest military engagement ever staged up till that day."

The center of action was at and around Lion Hill, built a decade or so after Napoleon's final defeat, over the site where the Prince of Orange was injured. Gordon of the Highlanders was mortally wounded a few hundred yards down the Ohain road and Lord Uxbridge lost his leg to a cannon ball farther down, along the Charleroi road.

The stretch of land below the hill has grown into a gaudy, Tivoli-like collection of bars, cases and restaurants, wax museums and para-documentary movie houses. The paintings of the Panorama Museum are badly in need of restoration. Some of the leases of Lion Hill operators are expiring, said Col. Bloch. "We'll fight a new battle of Waterloo and try to take them over." The Waterloo Committee has varied and ambitious plans: One is historical research, engendered and partly financed by the committee. The view of Waterloo has traditionally been presented from the south side of the Ohain road, with Bonaparte and his marshals as the heroes of the day. "We aren't out to get the emperor and his marshals," said Col. Bloch. "We merely want to put matters straight. After all, the allies won the battle, settling the history of Europe and much of the world for a couple of generations to come."

The duke, the baron and the colonel will have ample backing in their efforts: The founding members include Prof. Henri Bernard of the Royal Belgian Military Academy, Count Henri Pirenne, a noted historian, J. De Neeff, governor of Brahant, and André Caussin, mayor of Waterloo.

"We plan a marked path," said Col. Bloch, "with sign posts explaining just what happened where, to place it all in a fair, nonpartisan, historical perspective. In addition to scientific research and practical clean-up jobs, we wish to present to a general public the field between the farms Hougoumont and

The terrain at the center of action is considerably lower than it was in 1815. Men from Liège dug away some 1.13 million cubic feet of it to build Lion Hill in the mid-1820s. The original "Wellington elm tree," his command post, was chopped up by souvenir hunters within a few years after the battle. A new elm was planted on the spot in 1958 by the governor of Brahant and a platform is planned nearby by the committee to give a visitor an idea of how the duke saw the field from some 6 to 10 feet up

A first salvo from the committee was fired last month with the publication of a 48-page guidebook commissioned by the committee from charter member David Howarth, British writerhistorian. It lists five vantage points from where one may see what men and horses saw when Bonaparte's men and Wellington's stood face to face, with Blücher coming in from the east.

Mr. Howarth answers a lot of questions, but he raises even more: Why, he asks, did a sophisticated cavalryman like Ney decide to attack an infantry regiment in closed squares? He must have realized that horses do not advance against a solid hedge of bayonets, and that there was gunpowder and lead in the musket barrels back of those bayonets.

"Those are the type of questions the committee would like to solve or have solved," commented Col. Bloch. "From my point of view," said Mr. Howarth, "the most important thing with the Battle of Waterloo is that it brought half a century of more-or-less peace to troubled Europe."
